HEALTH AUTHORITIES yesterday declared 28 milk and milk products—including some well-known brands—as free of contamination but said two similar products made in China that they had tested should be permanently taken off the shelves for containing the industrial chemical melamine.

Not only that, The two Chinese-made milk and milk products which turned positive for melamine may also have been smuggled into the country, the Bureau of Food and Drugs (BFAD) said. (See full story on Page A4.)

Health Secretary Francisco Duque III identified the two Chinese-made products as Greenfield Milk Fresh Milk and Munggo Drink.

Those who have consumed the two products should remain calm, especially if they are feeling nauseating, Duque said at a press conference.

There may be 1,000 tamaraws in the wild

By TJ Arguison

AFTER BEING EXCITED TO MEAR EDUCATION, tamaraws have maintained a stable population of over 200 in the wilds of Occidental Mindoro since 2003, but there could be more than 1,000 of these out there.

This year, some 250 heads have been counted on the island of Mindoro, up by 30 heads the previous year, environment and provincial officials said yesterday.

"To have 30 more tamaraws, that's an accomplishment," Dr. Lydia Echaz, Batangas University president, said in a forum, leading environment and Mindoro officials for their conservation program.

The tamaraw is the root of the authenticity; its basketball players are known as the Zamboangue.

From a high of 10,000 in the 1960s, the population of the tamaraw has been drastically reduced to 200 heads in the late 1970s due to the destruction of their habitat by logging and cattle-ranching, as well as hunting.

The tamaraw, a cross between a carabao and a deer, is one of the world's 294 endangered or mammal species. It can only be found on Mindoro island.

Environment officers have counted 269 heads this year in their habitat in Mt. Igl-Bern National Park on the island, according to Antonio Manila of the Protected Area and Wildlife Bureau (PAWB).

From 195 heads in 2003, the population jumped to 253 in 2002 and further increased to 281 in 2003, but dipped to 232 in 2004 before sharply rising to 269 in 2005. The number dipped to 263 in 2006 and 239 in 2007.

Folksy, feisty Palin comes out swinging
but Biden up in polls

ST. LOUIS—A WALK-BOUNDED Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin, a novice on the American political stage and the first woman nominated by the Republicans as vice president, roared the party's campaign jingle back with ease. In a fiery debate with Democratic opponent Sen. Joe Biden, she attacked her presidential running mate Barack Obama of preparing to serve a "white flag of surrender" in Iraq.

Biden also took Thursday night she and Rep. Republican presidential nominee John McCain were "dead wrong" about Iraq from the beginning, and the United States was paying $20 billion a month to this country while ignoring the real cause of terrorism.

American voters were treated to one of the most intensely awaited political exchanges in an already historic presidential campaign that has arrived across well more than a year and culminated with the US financial system threatened with collapse and voters facing the possibility of economic pain not felt in the country since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

Palin also charged Obama, the Democratic presidential nominee, of setting up a "hoax" for US troops in combat and abandoned Iraqis for defiling the move, "especially with year out in the National Guard" and looked for Iraq.

John McCain roared against Biden for the troops, "as well, Biden countered, adding that McCain had been "dead wrong on Iraq" from the beginning, and the United States was paying $20 billion a month to this country while ignoring the real cause of terrorism.

Biden did not immediately reply to Palin's mention of his son, Beau, the Delaware attorney general, who is scheduled to fly to Fort Bliss, Texas, on Friday before deploying to Iraq.

Palin has a son who is in Iraq with the Alaska National Guard, although she did not mention that.

Palin also called Obama naive for saying he was willing

Philamlife up for sale
in AIG global fallout

By Doris C. Dumlao

THE COUNTRY'S LARGEST insurance company, Philippine American Life and General Insurance Co. (Philamlife), is up for sale as part of the global restructuring of its beleaguered parent company, American International Group Inc. (AIG).

In a statement last night, Philamlife said that "it had been identified for possible divestment along with some of its affiliates."

The statement followed an announcement by AIG in New York that it would release on core property and casualty insurance business worldwide after receiving an $85 billion lifeline from the US Federal Reserve.

AIG, one of the world's largest insurers, unveiled its intention to sell many "extremely valuable" assets and identified Philamlife as one of them.

Even before AIG made the announcement, Philamlife has attracted a number of suitors, including the Yenching group of companies.

Philamlife president and CEO Jose Guio Jr. said in a statement: "Philamlife remains to be an able and strongly capitalized organization. Our policyholders and clients can be assured that their interests are protected because of the company's financial strength."

"A change of ownership will not in any way diminish policyholders' benefits and security,"

GSIS lawyer shrugs off raps

By Mirabelle V. Flores

ESTRELLA ELAMPERO, chief legal counsel of the Government Service Insurance System, has developed a petition for her to be sanctioned by the Supreme Court for allegedly violating the code of professional conduct for lawyers.

"I am not a lawyer," Elampero said in a statement in reaction to the petition filed by a certain Alan Pagita, also a lawyer.

Elampero, together with another GSIS employee, is accused of violating the Code of Professional Responsibility, which was adopted by the Supreme Court in 2005, during a hearing on the petition.

Pagita, who claims to have filed the petition as a taxpayer and as a lawyer, said personally submitting a motion to a justice who is assigned to hear the case was unethical and was a transgression of unprofessionalism. Elampero and Pagita, however, are not lawyers, but are employed by the Supreme Court.

In response, Elampero said Pagita personally submitting an affidavit to the justice was unethical and was a transgression of unprofessionalism. Elampero and Pagita, however, are not lawyers, but are employed by the Supreme Court.

Elampero turned the tables on Pagita, saying that he is actually the one who submitted the petition. Elampero said Pagita, a former counsel of former President Joseph Estrada, was sanctioned by the Supreme Court in 2005 for violating the lawyer's Code of Professional Responsibility. His suspension was lifted after he apologized.

But delude as they are to those who pay them, they agreed to many automatic status which, if such terms were attached to emerging market positions, would have been a disaster. Now only the few lines of "single" loans that are backed by an income, no job and no assets packaged as well as in fresh A ratings.

Second and just as important is the double standard and hypocritical approach that the US Fed has been adopting all these years. They advance free-market economics, but there was the world's largest economy expressing interest rates for so long, even when there called for some tightening and correction. What that created was a massive financial crisis that was blown up by the thought that interest rates would rise even if they were to be raised.

Overseas credit from the middle of global banks for risk prevention that the American economy can also be vulnerable. This created serious trouble for all countries in Wall Street and other global markets such as the London market. Increasingly, it is unknown, overseas made it easy for the free market in the investment, looking more in long-term with more and more credit to satisfy the insatiable thirst for bigger profits and capital gains. Motivation for its growth is a virtue left only to the most prudent in exchange in some nations. So, when are they, Overseas? Why are you so patently quiet now...?

I saw how this world was eating up governments, including ours. Though it is in press, there is a probability that some government institutions may have been "lured" into buying these credits, just because they were made to feel "superior" doing it. I believe me, there was no such gain, saving and doing, and without that went into the domestic market process of acquiring these credits.

Third in the long denial of American and European that the bubble was bursting. When the subprime crisis started to peak the bubble burst in August 2007, many large fund managers sold down Asia instead of avoiding Wall Street stocks, when Asian fundamentals looked as much better. The one claim to it was there was nothing to be gained from hanging on. In many US would have been accused of sounding stupid by the taxpayer who was coming to look more and more asked by the day. Many of these fund managers are now paying the heavy price, with the massive wealth destruction we are now seeing and loss of thousands of jobs being lost on Wall Street.

It might be true, therefore, that the United States may go into a depression and some months of deflation before it finally recovers. My only wish is the open and transparent attitude to go with the clanking of Wall Street and the massive correction in the global system, so we may begin to witness an overall greater stability and avoid world economic. Without thinking as it may seem, we all got to start somewhere.

Moving forward, putting good money after bad but it is a mistake belief will cause doubling the damage. The problem is so widespread and does not involve just a few banks. A bailout is a avoid a systemic risk. What the United States has to more than systemic, it is fundamental. The subprime crisis is not a mere problem, it is a crisis, but the global should reflect, and I am not referring to the taxpayers.

Here at home, we were lucky to have had the major crisis earlier—a blessing to the system that brought stability and provided our financial markets, now for a bailout. But there's no telling where the contagion will go next as if we are not careful. There is a great need for transparency, prioritization and vigilance. It is not a crisis that is the crisis, but the crisis is in the system. In the 1990s, so be it, because a fundamental solution to the global problem is to go together to order to protect our system. The economy will remain robust and budget deficit but the power of growth is in the oil and coal. Therefore to say we can't put plans all our best into our own. That would be a mistake. They can and take stock of what's going on. They can't but we can do better than every nation state.

Going back to where it started, what brought this problem to the United States was the loss of things most important: honesty and fundamental honesty.

PNP promotion now tied ...

In a press conference in Camp Crame yesterday, PNP Chief Director General Juan Velasco said the nationwide and the body must include (PNP) would also be considered in the promotion of ranking officers.

The PNP is composed by dividing a person's working length (rank) by the square of his/her height (in feet) to get a number. Based on the US National Institute of Health, a normal BMI is between 18 and 24.9. A BMI of 25 to 29.9 is considered overweight, 30 to 34.9 is mildly obese, 35 to 39.9 is moderately obese, and a BMI of 40 and above is severely obese.

Velasco said the Director for Human Resources and Doctrine Development (DRD) already has a study on the physical condition of PNP officers based on their rank and the BMI.

If an officer is physically fit, he is more effective in police operations, he said.

Good judge

"When we are contemplating the placement of top positions on certain characteristics of physical fitness, we want to see how long it would take an officer to climb the stairs of a 30-story building... that would be a good judge," said Velasco, who says every day.

He said the PNP would not impose a weight limit for officers as had been done in the past, although he encouraged all officers to be "physically fit."

"We encourage you to maintain to be physically fit. Even if they are a little bulky they should be physically fit," Velasco said.

Sen. Purisima stressed, during his term as PNP Chief, imposed a 34-inch weight limit for all officers.

Service providers

PNP spokesperson Chief Insp. Wilfredo Mandanillo said the Senior Officers Planning and Promotion Board (SOPPB) would also use the results of the officer's last two physical tests as a gauge of his physical fitness.

"With the new qualification provided by the PNP Chief, there will be no more in terms of ranking promotion. Being able to climb 30 flights of stairs will be a minimum in assessing officers for senior positions," Mandanillo said.

The PNP physical test is conducted twice a year and is only a "preliminary assessment of the physical capability" of an officer, he said. "It will only show how fit you are as an officer. It's part of your career."

The results of the physical test will also determine if an officer is a candidate for a senior rank. The PNP Chief said that in proper physical shape, the weight limit for PNP officers would be separated from the rank.

Seven minutes

Earlier, two police officers died after falling on a police physical training drill. The fall happened on the stairs.

Included in the physical exams are sit-ups, push-ups and a one-kilometer run. The officers 30 years old and above, the officers said the standard time for the run is seven minutes.

Remember that while the PNP did not have a 10-story building, they would stand a one-hour approximating the climb.

What for is the covenant?

EDITORS OF THE COURT OF APPEALS signed last Sept. 14 a "covenant" in which they committed to "repair the damage caused" by the February scandal linked to the Manila G-20 case. They vowed to "open our databases online... show there are no case files of magistrates who are now prohibited to..."

The covenant continues:

- The creation of a one-stop shop that will handle the filing of cases, payment of docket fees, follow up of cases, etc.
- Electronic filing of cases
- Revision of the Internal Rules of the Court of Appeals
- Reorganization of a retired Supreme Court Justice as Undersecretary for the Court of Appeals and
- Case load reduction.

If it is a pending court case, is like a routine government contract, the justice said, "the one-stop shop is intended to reduce the irregularities by increasing the number of agencies that a litigant would have to go to, setting and following up a case."

As if machines alone generate public trust, they said. "The setting of cases will become electronic to make sure that there will be no more manipulation in assigning cases to judges."

As if technical rules are the linchpin of a just justice, they promised that the Internal Rules of the Court of Appeals would be drafted and amendments would be proposed.

The question is, why limit the authority to the Court of Appeals? What about the judges, the justices, the Court of Appeals, and the lower courts per se? Why not apply the Cebuensis requires access to all judicial regions of the country?

Chief Justice Renato Corona, with his usual open and honest mind that the "teaching" covenant could be achieved through moral reform, that "together we shall strive, sincerely and courageously, to be more innovative and productive..."

The problem with moralism, Filipinos are otherwise, is that in times of trouble they rely on God as their refuge even with respect to justice and morality as we see it become maling.

Moral reform, yes. But we notice today's moral rules of politicians, magistrates and others, however enough to achieve it? Do justice and integrity be the principles of moral righteousness as it then translated ruled by good and justice, honesty and integrity, respect and courtesy? That is why I listen to the following words of the Chief Justice with a grain of salt. "I cannot but confess with pain that we need moral renewal in this struggle to restore the judiciary. It is not right that the first components of our conscience is moral deterioration. This is a recognition that our legal system is vulnerable to the moral rot."

All right, Mr. Justice. Let's get down to hard and ethical work. Case files, please. Produce results.

Filipinos still care about the bells of Balangiga

I WOULD LIKE TO THANK RAMON L. MIGUEL FOR his column "The Bell(s) of Balangiga, a case of amnesia." (Cebuensis, 9/29/08) I have read so many articles about the bells, yet I have never specifically read one such issue.

By contrast to what he wrote at the end of his column, I believe many Filipinos still care about ringing such those bells to Balangiga. I am one of them, despite the reduced education I received in my youth, and the Philippine government's dishonest administration in the American government for the past hundred years and more. I even feel strongly against the genocide war the American imperialism launched against the Filipino people in 1898.

As long as the House of Representatives writing about the war and the bells, more Filipinos will be made aware, remember and care about them.

Festival of 'faces of hope, smiles' opens

By Carlo P. Gomez
Bacolod City

THE 2008 MASSKARA FESTIVAL, designed around the theme, "Bacolod, City of the World," opened with a bang on Wednesday amid a shower of confetti and balloons filling the sky with a kaleidoscope of colors.

President Maanagpal-Ampay declared the first ever Chikil (candle) to declare the festival's opening and did a bit of dancing to the beat of the Maanagpal music.

"The words of the Maanagpal festival are faces of hope and smiles. And they will hopefully reflect the real faces of the people of Bacolod," the President said.

Bacolod Mayor Eraldo Gamboa said the city's people had made the event world-famous. The city is known as the city of smiles and its residents have remained proud of their culture, strong-willed but warm nature.

Some 10,000 guests, the Maanagpal will end on Oct. 10. Its performers have been invited to perform around the world as tourism ambassadors of Bacolod, Gamboa said.

The word Maanagpal has a double meaning. It is a blend of the English word "mass" or many and "Naga" in the Ilocano word for face.

"We are honored to have the President open what we look forward to as the biggest Maanagpal celebration yet," Ilocos Norte Governor Ed Trillanes said on Wednesday.

Since 2001, when Mayor Eraldo Gamboa started at support and appreciated our group as organizers of the festival, Maanagpal has continuously grown and expanded. We hope to push the last ones home this year," Trillanes said.

Family-friendly

He said the city plans to ensure visitors had been re-engineered to make it more family-friendly. New structures have been built and more lights have been installed.

New rules such as banning vehicles and the use of disposable will be enforced, he pointed out.

This year's festival has more international, such as having their major segments for the Maanagpal Maanagpal, the Maanagpal Maanagpal dance and the Maanagpal Maanagpal.

The Maanagpal Queen's festival costume competition will be held during the evening dancing competition, with the Maanagpal Queen riding on floats in the plaza. Coronation night will be held on Oct. 18 at the special venue during the street dancing.

The area games and live music, dressed in costume, will also join the countdown to the 70th Charter Day party at City Hall. A grand street party with live bands will be held. At midnight, the people will sing the Maanagpal song as fireworks will light up the skies.

Big groups of at least 30 dancers will compete in street dancing.

Mask exhibits

Early, the Maanagpal Queen's festival, will provide an opportunity to exhibit homegrown masks, using homemade instruments from local materials and performing traditional folk.

An exhibit for masks called the Maanagpal Maanagpal will run at the Design Gallery in Marikina City. Some 10 to 15 years, the visual arts show, spearheaded by the city's internationally known artist, has been known for its forward-looking vision, playing around the idea of magical masks.

THE MASSKARA Festival in Bacolod City opened on Oct. 1 with festivities to continue until Dec. 10.

Salvage diver hospitalized

Cyanide exposure blamed, but...

By Tara Quiñones

AN AMERICAN DIVER WHO PULLED out of salvaging operations at the wreck of MV Alfonso of the Star in Iloilo yesterday for symptoms and diagnosis of cyanide poisoning is reportedly exposed to cyanide aboard a salvage vessel.

John Hancock, a 38-year-old diver of Alfonso from Texas, was admitted to Manila by a Coast Guard rescue ship yesterday morning after experiencing chest pain and numbness on his face and his limbs.

Dr. Fred Riquena, a Coast Guard doctor, quoted Hancock as saying he was exposed to cyanide while handling a chemical called cyanogen from the Star's main stock on board a Titan vessel.

The accident occurred early last night and is not related to the ongoing search for the Manila wreck. The Manila was reported ship, the Coast Guard said.

Halcyon through

A total of 37 more barrels of cyanide were recovered on 3 p.m., following the recovery of the 11th barrel. There are an estimated 400 barrels of the toxic agent in the Manila wreck.

Subjecting Alfonso, in a press statement, stated that the diver was suffering from "severe health issues."

The statement quoted Titan Captain, who mentioned the Alfonso and the Star were in contact with Hancock as they left.

"He has personal health issues, which has nothing to do with the accident or the job. He was cleared for the job before joining the team and he is a professional diver and properly trained in hazardous materials handling," Captain said.

Earlier that night, following some work for a Manila ship, Hancock complained of "shortness of breathing and tingling sensation in his left arm, and overall feeling of nausea."

John was immediately brought to shore and was first attended to by Alfonso from Manila and Alfonso from the Department of Health's advance medical response team.

No cyanide

Titan and Halcyon later officials they denied that Hancock was exposed to cyanide.

"We categorically deny cyanide poisoning because we don't handle cyanide on board. We have no need for it. In the second, there has never been any incident of any chemical spillage in our several operations," said Ed Riquena, chief of the advance medical response team.

John stayed at a local hospital overnight before being taken to Manila to undergo emergency surgery.

Hancock was stable when he landed at the Medical City in Pasig before being transferred yesterday following a 40-minute flight from Alfonso Island, Riquena said. He was an oxygen support throughout the trip, the doctor said.

"The patient had cyanide was accidentally spilled into his left nostril in their work area about a Star ship.

They are using this chemical for operations. After that, he experienced left arm weakness and difficulty breathing," said Riquena.

As of press time, there was no indication on how much was spilled and where Titan used the cyanogen. The chemical compound is known to be used in the manufacturing industry for paint, foam and more and causes serious upon contact.

Dermal exposure

"No exposure was denied, he absorbed it through the skin, but his exposure is minimal because, by his own account, he was able to wash it off and decompress himself on the spot. We know that Titan like this have very strict safety regulations and they are well trained in such situations," said Riquena.

He said Hancock's attending physician at the Medical City is also looking at the possibility that the diver is suffering from acute coronary syndrome, a condition which blood vessels in the heart are constricted.

Dr. Riquena mentioned Hancock's symptoms but said there was "no definitive diagnosis yet" on his condition and gave no estimate on the patient's chemical exposure.

"This left arm was numb and [reportedly] difficulty breathing. There is no definitive diagnosis yet because there's our ongoing laboratory test. We will check if the family has a history of cardiac problems," said Riquena when asked by press yesterday.

"He has nothing to do with the substance," she said.

It has yet to be ascertained exactly when the accident occurred, but Riquena said Hancock reported his complaints on Thursday when he had been out of the water for four days.

Riquena's team continued the search for the Manila wreck on the evening of the same day.

Planet facing mass die-off of animals, plants, say experts

PARIS—EARTH'S ANIMAL AND PLANT SPECIES ARE VANISHING at unprecedented rates, evidence that the planet is facing a tsunami of mass extinction, experts gathering for a global conservation conference next week have warned.

"Biodiversity is disappearing at an accelerated rhythm and we have to act quickly to slow and prevent the extinction crisis," said John Stuart-Latham, director general of the International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN), which is organizing the Oct. 5-14 congress.

With 12,000 known species and more than 1,000 put at risk, the IUCN says thousands of field projects around the globe to monitor and help restore natural environments.

"The species is disappearing... each one is the product of millions of years of evolution and plays a role in the ecosystem," explained "Woody" Pugh, head of the IUCN's climate change and species program.

There are many reasons to protect the diversity of life on earth, under pressure from loss of habitat, pollution, climate change and over-exploitation, scientists say.

One is the sheer scope of the damage under way.

"The evidence is overwhelming—and we have really good data now—that what we are seeing is probably a mass extinction," he said. In 60 million years, said Michael Hoffmann, a national expert at IUCN who worked closely on the Red List.

The current pace of die-off is 100 to 1,000 times higher than the so-called "background rate" of extinction—the average rate, over billions of years, at which species enter the classroom on Earth.

THE PLANET'S ANIMAL AND PLANT SPECIES ARE VANISHING AT UNPRECEDENTED RATES, EVIDENCE THAT THE PLANET IS FACING A TSUNAMI OF MASS EXTINCTION, EXPERTS GATHERING FOR A GLOBAL CONSERVATION CONFERENCE NEXT WEEK HAVE WARNED.

Dodgers clobber Cubs; Rays shine

CHICAGO—THE CHICAGO CUBS' championship drought looks to extend to another 108 years after they fell to a 10-0 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers on Thursday, making it two losses from two home games in the best-of-five National League Division Series.

Philadelphia also took a 2-0 lead in their NLDS by beating Pittsburgh, 5-2.

Manny Ramirez hit a season-high home for Los Angeles, while Russell Martin had a three-run double, and the Dodgers took advantage of four errors by the clobbered Cubs.

"It wasn't good baseball. In fact, the last two days, that's probably been the two worst games we've played all year," frustrated Chicago manager Luis Pierrelini said.

Chicago became the 23rd major league team to lose the first two games at home in a best-of-five playoff series, according to the Blue Spruce Review, and only one has come back to win—the 2003 New York Yankees against Oakland.

Chicago's striding tie to the World Series was 1906, but quickly turned itself on the brink of elimination.

In Houston, to close out one playoff game, the Texas Rangers beat the Chicago White Sox, 5-4, on Thursday in the opener of the American League Division Series.

Just call him 'Plong Plong'

By Phyllis M. Cardillo

LIKE MANY AMATEUR SUCCESS STORIES, Chongchong Plong's success had a long history.

It started when he was just 14 years old. "I remember giving my mother P100 a day as pocket money in 2000 and she helped her nine-year-old children."

Plong told the Inquirer in Manila while preparing for his match last night.

"I had to go school and then working because we didn't have that much money. I had to do that because my father died a few months before," added Plong, whose son and child, a daughter, was born a week before the start of the event.

"I was the youngest in a family of nine and I had to work."

Plong told his father, a teacher, to help him. Though the family residence was near the city of Cagayan de Oro, Chongchong was a member of the family of working men. It was in 2000, he said, he got into his first job.

"I was at the time in a school in Cagayan de Oro," Plong, who is being supported by his mother, said.

Inflation may have peaked in August

By Corrie S. Naruna

AHEAD OF A CRUCIAL MONETARY POLICY MEETING on Monday, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas chief yesterday affirmed that the country's inflation rate may have peaked, hinting at some leeway to end its cycle of interest rate increases very soon.

"It looks like—if we haven't seen yet—we may be nearing the peak. It's also possible we may have peaked already in August particularly if you look at not only what's happening here but also what's happening in other countries, particularly in Asian countries," BSP Governor Benjamin Dominguez said in a press conference yesterday.

"You've already seen a successful inflation is going down and that could also happen to us," Dominguez said.

The BSP's policy-making Monetary Board is set to discuss monetary settings on Monday, without waiting for the release of the September inflation report by the National Statistics Office. The BSP's report is not due until Tuesday next week.

The annual bank, however, has forecast a range of 4.5 to 5.5 percent and a low of 3.5 percent against the 12.5 percent year-on-year rate in August.

"When we come up with the forecast for September we said it could be higher or lower depending on the effect of monetary developments. At the same time, we saw inflation in all our baskets," Dominguez said.

The policy meeting on Monday is seen by financial markets as a turning point for the central bank, which is having 17-year high inflation against a backdrop of a slowing domestic economy and a very

One firm backs GSIS car insurance proposal

COMPANY ADAPTS THE PORTION of fellow motorists' insurers. Mapfre Insurer has backed proposals to make the Government Service Insurance System the sole provider of motor vehicle insurance in the country and to give private firms a lesser role as reinsurers.

Glenn Fontaine, senior vice president of Mapfre Insurer, said the company agreed that the GSIS proposal would help address the problem of motor vehicle insurance policies being sold in the country.

"There are really quite a number of fly-by-night operators, and they are eroding the credibility of the whole motor vehicle insurance industry," Fontaine told in an interview yesterday at the celebration of Mapfre Insurer's 50th anniversary held in Marikina City.

Fontaine said the GSIS proposal would not only protect policyholders from fraud, it would also make the process of settling insurance more convenient for them.

Under the GSIS proposal, individuals who will require their vehicles with the Land Transportation Office will automatically be given their GSIS-compliance third-party liability coverage.

Mapfre Insurer, which is 75 percent owned by Spanish insurance firm Mapfre, claims to be the 8th largest motor insurance firm in the country. It generated P1.7 billion in gross premium collection in January to September this year, up 12.5 percent from that of the same period a year ago.

The GSIS proposal is being opposed by members of the Philippine Insurers and Reinsurers Association (PIRA), a group of motor insurance companies. In a recent press conference, officials of this group said the GSIS plan to make them the sole provider of motor vehicle insurance would be a government intervention in private business.

BOC exceeds Sept. collection target

FCDU lending grew by 4.3% in 2nd quarter

By David C. Dumlao

LOANS EXTENDED BY THE banking system's foreign currency deposit units (FCDUs) grew by a modest 4.3 percent to P4.6 billion in the quarter ending in June, compared with the previous quarter, as the US dollar is rebounded against the peso in the second quarter, tempering the domestic market's appetite for foreign currency borrowing.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas yesterday reported that the FCDU loan book in the second quarter also expanded by 49.4 percent from that of the previous year, largely due to net loan extensions by banks.

But growth in the second quarter slowed down from the 14.4 percent expansion seen in the first quarter.

The appreciation of the peso against the US dollar earlier in the second quarter, however, led to foreign exchange flexibility in their requirements.

However, due to soaring fuel and food prices, and with the global financial market becoming more turbulent, the peso reversed its initial trend starting in March this year, which, in turn, reduced foreign currency borrowings.

The FCDU is a sort of a local bank as it has a branch of a foreign bank authorized by the BSP to engage in foreign exchange denominated transactions, such as accepting foreign currency deposits and granting of foreign currency loans.

Those who needed FCDU loans as of end-June were mostly enterprises wanting foreign exchange to fund foreign exchange requirements, such as the importation or offshore debt servicing.

Loans to commodity and service exporters amounted for 21 percent of the total FCDU loan portfolio, followed by public utility firms (19 percent), and professional services, including oil companies (16 percent).

More 56 percent had made use of banknotes maturing payable over a term of more than one year, while 44 percent had a term of one year or less.

Loans to the private sector accounted for the bulk of 97 percent of FCDU loans, with the public sector representing the small remainder. Philippine banks alone took 75 percent of the loans.

As of end-June, FCDU deposits accepted by the banking system amounted to P26.5 billion. For every dollar of FCDU deposits, the banks lent out about $0.25 at end-June. For this year already an impressive total of $0.23 was lent by the end of March.

The relatively low loan-to-deposit ratio—against the local banking system's 75 percent ratio on peso-denominated accounts—showed they likely were still cautious in lending to other countries given the local exchange rate risks.

During the Asian currency turmoil of 1997, which led to an unprecedented devaluation of the peso, many companies were under pressure to shore foreign debt facilities.

Customs official cites peso's depreciation

By Michelle E. Reyes

THE BUREAU OF CUSTOMS ENDED its current collection target in September, ahead of just by the depreciation of the peso and higher than programmed collection of incoming duty payments by government agencies.

Preliminary data from the BOC showed that it collected P22.996 billion in September, exceeding the goal of P21.56 billion set for the month. The latest collection also marked a year-on-year growth from P21 billion in September last year.

Month-end revenue collection, which is mostly composed of duty payments by the National Road Authority for its tolls in ports, amounted for P5.92 billion of total BOC collections for September. Month-end payments were much higher than the 2007 collection reported for the month.

The BOC's performance in September brought total collections for the first nine months of the year to P191.61 billion, higher than the goal of P185.23 billion programmed for the period.

Collec-tions made in the last nine months, month payments accounted for P39.54 billion. This was higher than the P34.63 billion expected for the period.

During the 10th day of the import fair, which is still being held in the domestic market, the agency received a tax rebates from the government so that it can pay tariffs on its imports.

In granting the tax rebates, which is in accordance with the law, the agency received a document to a taxpayer statement form like the MER, which was the document to pay for taxes on imports.

The tax rebates is normally delivered from the foreign budget of the government entity covering the rebates.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue said the BOC, both taxable month payments in computing their revenue collections. Some legislators previously questioned this practice, saying that the inclusion of month payments resulted to boost the revenue apportionment collection performance.

But BOC and BIR officials said it was into fail to include similar payments in their collections. Collecting either such as amount requires the same effort on the part of the BIR and the BOC, they said.

Apart from month payments, the BOC performance also helped boost the BOC's collection to last this year.

Customs Commissioner Angelito Mondul earlier said the depreciation of the peso to a level below that expected was a blessing in disguise as far as the BOC was concerned.

The peso closed at 46.917 against the US dollar in the last trading day of September, much weaker than the closing of 40.82 in mid-July.

When the government set the revenue collection target of the BOC, it assumed that the peso would hover between 40 and 42 against the peso dollar.

Depreciation of the peso helps increase Customs collection because it makes imported goods more expensive in local currencies.

Import tariffs are computed using the peso value of the imported goods.

Pacific Online revenue up 36% to P466.1M in first 9 months

By Elizabeth Tan-see-Carson

PACIFIC ONLINE SYSTEMS CORP., THE online literary system provider of the Philippine Charity Lotteries Office in the Visayas and Mindanao, reported that its total revenue grew by 36 percent to P466.1 million in the first nine months of the year from that of the same period in 2007.

Pacific Online did not disclose the comparative figures of the previous year. According to the literary system provider, this figure indicated that POCOL sales rose in the Visayas and Mindanao reached P6.3 billion.

"The marked improvement is attributable mainly to the successful roll-out of promotional offers amounting to P1.511," Pacific

Online chief financial officer Marlon A. Dominguez said in a disclosure to the stock exchange. "With the expected robust sales in the remaining months of the year, the company's sales performance may reflect an increase in its significant growth in 2008."

Lucky Circle Corp., a wholly owned indirect subsidiary of Pacific Online, which owns and operates into online in 10th island nationwide, is performing strongly for the company.

Lucky Circle has 16 lotto outlets at present and will grow its number of market reach. "The company said POCOL is ready to launch its new batch of 20 million lottery scratch tickets in time for the peak holiday season. Pacific Online sold out its 2008 batch, worth P400 million, three months ahead of schedule."

A bigger dome

I MISSED EXPERIENCING THE UNAP- peared, like thousands of others all over the world, I missed it because there were no more taken available. But, I watched it on TV, live, seeing it on screen, special, experiencing it live, just not the same. I believe I've watched more games live before, but professional and university basketball games, and the intensity is certainly different from merely watching it on TV.

With an Amco-La Salle Sports Center on the one hand, featuring the thrill and excitement involved are inseparable in any other kind of sport. Just imagine the reaction of the fans when every time Nancy Lieke makes a basket or when the score makes a large point that I thought of basketball, let's go on to the main point: my own love is definitely growing.

I just wished there had been some more variety. The event could have been held once more than the maximum number of the big dome at $10,000. The Amco-La Salle, the country's "Big Dome," was built at more than 50 years ago and was constructed when the national population was a mere one-fourth of what it is today. Now that we have a plethora of numerous events in sports, music, politics and even religious activities, the site used to acquire into that sense of life. It seems to me that the time is ripe for a bigger one.

Envision a huge hall

I can envision a huge hall in the Mall of Asia area. I can only wish that there were one of our forward-looking and innovative people would initiate such a vision. I learned that Cebu is planning to build a similar one. Its long building bigger and bigger exhibition halls to accommodate more product launches and similar participants, such as the World Trade Center and EXH, but not classical and modern remains the same.

Some could argue that by getting the big, the modern's view isn't. This may be true, however, the situation is easily resolved by installing big screens at appropriate spots so that details of the event activity can be viewed and the intensity will experience. The thrill is not lost in watching down live, but in experiencing it twice over of thousands who share the same passion.

The biggest arena witnessed 70,000 spectators and, despite risk of rain and discovery of the rain, the spectators had to hold on to an open field for lack of venue. Many Regatta would be more more inspired to enter the number of big fans could witness had delivered those thousands lower, in a country that goes again over magnets and previous game show hosts, we could see visitors to watch them.

It's about time

I believe it's about time we build a new mega venue. Regatta's new super-arena, the National Stadium, is a second next to the Yamanote Square and International "Big Top," has a capacity of 67,000 seated spectators. Appropriately, the International is also generated for their country has been improved. Similarly, the stadium of Malaysia can seat a crowd of 100,000.

It would be great for our national pride and reputation to have a comparable venue of our own, to host major events or fights of international caliber, where people from the Asian region can look to watch. It would be a definite boost to our nation's image.

The government can likewise speed up the construction of such a venue. Aside from handling the recent industry, the Filipino not even expect to be a part of lower price for the venue, since one of the venue will be constructed over the years.

The structure will generate both income and prestige for the country.

Smart phone that can enrich your life

By Russell Gomez

CELEBRATE DEVICES and Wireless Internet, which allow mobile consumers to connect and be in touch constantly with friends and family and business associates, are already the essentials of today's living. Smart phones, high-megapixel digital cameras, and affordable PCs are just some of these essential devices.

However, some devices go beyond that definition by providing an exciting experience to the consumer.

Samsung's new high-end camera phone the S8510 Innov8 is one such device. The multimedia slider phone is not only a feature-packed smart phone with great wireless functionalities but a versatile digital camera as well.

The look of the black metal-finish device is already similar to the appearance of any point-and-shoot digital camera. It has big camera lens with auto focus and premeasured flash. The side of the device holds the dedicated shutter button and a button for quick access to camera or video recording function and the photo and video album.

In fact, the S8510 Innov8 is the first commercially available camera phone that boasts of 8-megapixel compatibility.

Functioning solely as a digital camera, the S8510 Innov8 takes great pictures with great details and colors. Resolution for 8-megapixel photo is at 3264 x 2448 pixels. Similar to independent digital cameras, the camera camera function can do automatic panorama shooting, face detection, smile detection, and even face detection.

The camera also offers digital image stabilization and a wide dynamic range, which is useful to lighten up shadows in high-contrast modes. The general setting of the camera can be configured for such features like auto, extended digital zoom, sharper sound, contrast, saturation, and sharpening. Photos can also be geo-tagged, or automatically be placed with GPS coordinates.

ISO settings can also be configured from 50 up to 800 ISO) as well as metering options (matrix, spot or center-weighted). Aside from macro shot feature, the camera offers red-eye reduction, a time white balance and options for lighting, different effects like sepia, black and white, or negative.

For video function, the camera can record videos at 30 fps (frames per second) for 1080 quality and 120 fps for QVGA quality.

Think about the possibilities this do-it-all phone can offer to the user, particularly in distributing ideas to others. With this device, you can take a high-resolution video or photo of some extremely special and small, if not to mention of immediate speed, or you can do a direct presentation by looking up this device directly to a TV or projector.

As a smart phone, the S8510 Innov8 runs on Symbian 6.2 mobile operating system with 380 3rd edition UI. With a Symbian device, the user can easily access applications that are in standby mode on the screen. The shortcuts on standby mode include programs, calendar, music player, FM radio, and personalization features (profiles, themes, wallpaper, speed dial, etc.).

Other nice applications the S8510 Innov8 has include a DivX player and office tools like QuattroPro, Adobe PDF reader, currency converter, Zip, notes, and email reader application that reads text messages. It also offers Sns2x for Web chat and Web social networking function, Yahoo! Go, CMC, EA Sports and other easily accessible Web-based apps and services.

The S8510 Innov8 has a sliding Samsung keypad that offers nice feel and look. The large multi-touching 2.0 inch LCD display (16 million colors) is framed by a black shiny case. The Q-wa and optical touch pad located below the display to access most used apps makes this device a stand-out. The sensitive Crystal and the optical touch pad provide fluid like manager ability of buttons on the display.

This smart phone goes beyond the call and controls functionality as it offers GPS (global positioning system) that helps user find directions and places. The phone has a built-in GPS receiver with A-GPS function. Bluetooth with A2DP with SBC certification, HSDPA, high-speed download packet access at 7.2 Mbps, 3.5 audio jack, TV-out, a universal microUSB port, and expansion slot for a micro SD (up to 8 GB).

The Samsung S8510 is most, already offers the digital everything the consumer of today needs in just one small device that can almost do everything.

32GB P1000 for the S8510 version and P1000 for the S8510 version.
